

21 years ago, Brian withdrew $300
and drove his wife to the clinic...

One house, two minivans and three kids later, there's still no one who can fill these shoes.

Deceptive counseling is common. Healing is possible.

Jason throws a mean fast ball, Gracie doesn't know a stranger and Jen's the bookish one. Brian and Lisa love their kids, but they wonder about the one that came along when Lisa was sick and Brian lost his job. They believed the counselor who said there was no other option and the doctor who said it was just a blob of tissue. They never spoke of the abortion again ... until the day Lisa saw her first ultrasound – and her first picture of Jen. Ironically, the day Lisa fell apart was the day she and Brian finally got it together. They found the strength to confront a grief as unbearably big as a tiny pair of shoes.
